I. Introduction

Consumer reporting agencies collect and assemble or evaluate information about, among other things, the credit, criminal, employment, and rental histories of hundreds of millions of Americans. They package this information into consumer reports, which are restricted for use typically to creditors, insurers, landlords, employers, and others making eligibility and other decisions about consumers. This collection, assembly, evaluation, dissemination, and use of vast quantities of often highly sensitive personal and financial data about consumers poses significant risks to consumer privacy.

In 1970, Congress enacted the Fair Credit Reporting Act (FCRA), one of the first data privacy laws in the world, to regulate the consumer reporting market.¹ Before passing the FCRA, Congress investigated the growing data surveillance industry and found that, while consumer reporting agencies had assumed a vital role in assembling and evaluating consumer credit and other information on consumers to meet the needs of commerce, there was a need to ensure that they acted fairly, impartially, and with respect for consumers' right to privacy. In 1969, Senator Proxmire introduced S. 823, the Fair Credit Reporting Bill, which eventually became the FCRA.² When introducing the bill, Senator Proxmire described the problem as follows:

Although a number of congressional committees have recently begun to investigate the activities of credit reporting agencies, most Americans still do not realize the vast size and scope of today's credit reporting industry or the tremendous amount of information which these agencies maintain and distribute. For example, the Associated Credit Bureaus of America have over 2,200 members serving 400,000 creditors in 36,000 communities. These credit bureaus maintain credit files on more than 110 million individuals and in 1967 they issued over 97 million credit reports. Credit bureaus typically supply information on a person's financial status, bill paying record, and items of public record such as arrests, suits, judgments and the like. The information is furnished to creditors for the purpose of extending credit.

While the growth of this information network is somewhat alarming, what is even more alarming is the fact the system has been built up with virtually no public regulation or supervision. A few years ago, the executive branch proposed the establishment of a national data bank with personal information on every U.S. citizen. The "big-brother is watching" overtones of this project plus congressional opposition led to its quick abandonment. Yet we are building roughly the same type of data bank under private auspices but with none of the public safeguards.

I do not mean to suggest that credit reporting agencies perform no worthwhile function or that we should arbitrarily curb their growth. Credit reporting agencies are absolutely essential in today's credit economy where consumer debt has passed the $100 billion mark. The credit reporting industry has come into being and has grown in response to the demand by retailers, banks, and other financial institutions for sound information about the credit worthiness of consumers. Creditors need this information, and they need it as quickly as possible, in order to make sound credit decisions. And consumers need an efficient credit reporting industry in order to obtain credit promptly with a minimum of redtape [sic].

Therefore, my objective in introducing the fair credit reporting bill is to correct certain abuses which have occurred within the industry and to insure that the credit information system is responsive to the needs of consumers as well as creditors.³

Confidentiality was one of the main concerns expressed by Senator Proxmire in his statement introducing the bill. Senator Proxmire stated:

The fact that credit reporting agencies maintain files on millions of Americans, including their employment, income, billpaying record, marital status, habits, character and morals is not in and of itself so disturbing. What is disturbing is that this practice will continue, and will have to continue, if we continue to have an insurance system and a consumer credit system of the kind we have. What is disturbing is the lack of any public standards to insure that the information is kept confidential and used only for its intended purpose. The growing accessibility of this information through computer- and data-transmission techniques makes the problem of confidentiality even more important.⁴

The FCRA was designed to allow certain Congressionally sanctioned uses of consumer report data to continue, but to strictly prohibit other uses of consumer report data. In addition, Congress created accuracy requirements and gave consumers a right to see their data, and due process rights to dispute inaccurate or incomplete information in their files.⁵ The FCRA and its implementing regulation, Regulation V, 12 CFR part 1022, have been amended from time to time since the statute's enactment and impose obligations on consumer reporting agencies, entities that provide information to consumer reporting agencies (i.e., furnishers), and users of consumer reports.⁶ The Consumer Financial Protection Bureau (CFPB) has rulemaking, enforcement, and supervisory authority to administer the FCRA.⁷

Authority over 15 U.S.C. 1681m(e) and 1681w is limited to the Federal banking agencies and the National Credit Union Administration, the Federal Trade Commission, the Commodity Futures Trading Commission, and the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission.

The consumer credit reporting industry has consistently been a major source of consumer complaints. Complaints about credit or consumer reporting represented roughly 76 percent of consumer complaints submitted to the CFPB during 2022, far more than any other category of consumer product or service.⁸ Credit or consumer reporting has been the most-complained-about category of consumer financial product or service to the CFPB every year since 2017.⁹

In addition, since the FCRA's enactment in 1970, advances in technology have led, particularly in recent years, to a rapid evolution of the consumer reporting marketplace. For example, companies using business models that rely on newer technologies and novel methods to collect and sell consumer data have emerged and evolved with the growth of the internet and advanced technology. These companies, sometimes labeled "data brokers," "data aggregators," or "platforms," broadly engage in activities that the FCRA was designed to regulate.

The CFPB is considering proposals to regulate many data broker activities as covered under the FCRA, which would prohibit the sale of covered data for purposes other than those authorized under the FCRA. Most notably, this would limit the sale of certain data broker data for advertising or marketing, for the most part constraining the sale of data to only those companies or persons to whom the consumer applied for credit, insurance, employment, housing, or some other service, or to whom the consumer otherwise authorized access. This would also subject certain data brokers to FCRA obligations, ensuring, for example, that consumers have a right to obtain data about themselves held by data brokers and to dispute inaccuracies in that data.

Separately, the CFPB is considering proposals to address the problem of unreliable or unnecessary medical collection tradelines appearing on consumer reports. Such proposals would modify a regulatory exemption originally promulgated by a group of Federal banking agencies and the National Credit Union Administration that allows creditors to consider a consumer's medical debt information when underwriting credit and would prohibit consumer reporting agencies from including medical collection tradelines in consumer reports provided to creditors. Research has shown that medical collections are less predictive of serious delinquency than non-medical collections. This may be in part because of medical billing and insurance practices, or the fact that the very nature of medical debt is unpredictable.¹⁰ This can result in coercive credit reporting, which can force people to pay medical bills they may not or should not owe. For these reasons, the CFPB is considering proposals that would revise an exemption that allows creditors to consider a consumer's medical debt when underwriting credit and would prohibit consumer reporting agencies from including medical collection tradelines on consumer reports.

The CFPB is also considering proposals to address other issues that have arisen in the years since the FCRA's enactment, or that are areas of particular risk for consumer harm. Among others, these include proposals related to the obligations of consumer reporting agencies to investigate disputes, including disputes involving systemic issues.

II. The SBREFA Process

Federal law provides that, prior to issuing a proposed rule that could have a significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities, the CFPB must consult with small entities that are likely to be subject to the regulation.¹¹ As part of the consultation process, the CFPB must convene a Small Business Review Panel (Panel)¹² to collect advice and recommendations from these small entities or their representatives (small entity representatives). Small entities likely to be affected by the FCRA proposals the CFPB currently is considering include: (1) entities that meet (or would meet, if the proposals were adopted) the definition of consumer reporting agency in FCRA section 603(f), (2) entities that furnish information to consumer reporting agencies, and (3) creditors that use medical debt collection information in making credit eligibility determinations.

SBREFA requires the CFPB to collect the advice and recommendations of small entity representatives about whether the proposals under consideration might increase the cost of credit for small entities and if alternatives exist that might accomplish the stated objectives of applicable statutes while minimizing any such increase.¹³ The small entity representatives will have the opportunity to provide input on these topics during the CFPB's SBREFA consultation process, including at the Panel meeting.

¹² See 5 U.S.C. 609(b). The Panel consists of representatives from the CFPB, the Small Business Administration's Chief Counsel for Advocacy, and the Office of Information and Regulatory Affairs in the Office of Management and Budget. The Office of Advocacy is an independent office within the Small Business Administration, so its views do not necessarily reflect the views of the Small Business Administration or the Administration.

In accordance with the above requirements, the CFPB is convening a Panel to obtain input from small entity representatives on the proposals under consideration for an FCRA rulemaking. The CFPB has prepared this Outline to provide background to the small entity representatives and to facilitate the SBREFA process.

Within 60 days of convening, the Panel will complete a report (Panel Report) on the feedback received from the small entity representatives, and the CFPB will consider that feedback and the Panel Report as it prepares a proposed rule. The CFPB will coordinate with small entity representatives on the timing for their feedback. Written feedback from small entity representatives will be appended to the Panel Report. Once a proposed rule is published, the Panel Report will be placed in the public rulemaking record.

The SBREFA process is only one step in the CFPB's rulemaking process. No entity will be required to comply with any of the proposals addressed in this Outline before a proposed rule is published, public comment on the proposed rule is received and reviewed by the CFPB, a final rule is issued, and the implementation period between the final rule's issuance date and its compliance date concludes.

The CFPB is conferring with other Federal agencies, including the prudential regulators and the Federal Trade Commission, on the proposals under consideration.¹⁴ The CFPB is also interested in hearing feedback about the proposals under consideration from other stakeholders, including small stakeholders who are not small entity representatives. Stakeholders are welcome to provide written feedback on the proposals under consideration by emailing it to CFPB_consumerreporting_rulemaking@cfpb.gov no later than October 30, 2023. Such feedback will not be included in the Panel Report but may be subject to public disclosure.¹⁵

III. Proposals and Alternatives Under Consideration

Here, the CFPB describes the proposals and alternatives under consideration and lists questions on which it seeks small entity representative feedback. In addition to the listed questions, the CFPB is interested in any other input small entity representatives wish to provide on any of the proposals under consideration.

¹⁵ Sensitive personal information, such as account numbers or Social Security numbers, or names of other individuals, should not be included. Small entity representatives and other stakeholders considering submitting proprietary or confidential business information should contact the CFPB in advance to discuss whether and how that information should be provided.

The questions in this Outline are numbered sequentially throughout for ease of reference. When providing feedback, please note the relevant topic and question number(s). The questions begin here with several inquiries that apply to all the proposals under consideration.

- Q1. How, if at all, will the proposal under consideration require your firm to change its operations, products, or services?
- Q2. What do you anticipate will be the initial and ongoing costs to your firm, if any, of complying with the proposal under consideration? If applicable, how do those costs compare to your firm's current costs to comply with the provision(s) of the FCRA or Regulation V related to the proposal under consideration? Please quantify all such costs by type and amount to the extent possible.
- Q3. What aspect or aspects of complying with the proposal under consideration would be the most challenging?
- Q4. What alternative approaches, if any, should the CFPB consider in lieu of the proposal under consideration?
- Q5. Other than compliance costs, what costs, burdens, or unintended consequences should the CFPB consider with respect to the proposal under consideration? Please quantify if possible. What alternatives, if any, would mitigate such costs, burdens, or unintended consequences?
- Q6. Are there any statutes or regulations with which your firm must comply that may duplicate, overlap, or conflict with the proposal under consideration? What challenges or costs would your firm anticipate in complying with any such statutes or regulations and the CFPB's proposal under consideration?
- Q7. What factors disproportionately affecting small entities should the CFPB be aware of when evaluating the proposal under consideration? Would the proposal under consideration provide unique benefits to small entities?

A. Definitions of consumer report and consumer reporting agency

FCRA section 603\(d\)¹⁶ defines the term “consumer report” to mean, in general, any written, oral, or other communication of any information by a consumer reporting agency bearing on a consumer's credit worthiness, credit standing, credit capacity, character, general reputation, personal characteristics, or mode of living which is used or expected to be used or collected in whole or in part for the purpose of serving as a factor in establishing the consumer's eligibility for (A) credit or insurance to be used primarily for personal, family, or household purposes; (B) employment purposes; or (C) any other permissible purpose authorized under FCRA section 604.

FCRA section 603\(f\)¹⁷ defines the term “consumer reporting agency” as any person which, for monetary fees, dues, or on a cooperative nonprofit basis, regularly engages in whole or in part in the practice of assembling or evaluating consumer credit information or other information on consumers for the purpose of furnishing consumer reports to third parties, and which uses any means or facility of interstate commerce for the purpose of preparing or furnishing consumer reports.

The CFPB is considering several proposals related to the definitions of “consumer reporting agency” and “consumer report.” Certain of these proposals would address whether and how the FCRA applies to newer actors and practices in the credit reporting marketplace, including questions such as coverage of data brokers and certain consumer reporting agency practices regarding marketing and advertising.

1. Data brokers

Consumers regularly engage in activities that reveal their personal information, often without realizing it.¹⁸ For example, they may visit a website, charge an item to a credit card, or download an app, in each instance providing information to the entity with whom they interact. These entities may, in turn, provide or sell the information they collect to third-party data brokers with whom the consumer does not have a direct relationship.¹⁹

Some of the information data brokers collect and sell is private, such as information about a consumer’s finances or health conditions. Other information is public, such as information about criminal records or lawsuits. Data brokers use the information they collect for a variety of purposes, including to generate reports for use in credit and employment decisions, to create lists of consumers with certain attributes for use in marketing, and to operate databases to detect fraud. In addition to the privacy harms it poses, the collection and sale of consumer information by data brokers can facilitate fraud, identity theft, harassment, discrimination, and abusive and unfair conduct. Many data brokers are consumer reporting agencies under current law.

The CFPB is considering proposals to address the application of the FCRA to data brokers, including to codify current law. These include proposals to provide that: consumer information provided to a user who uses it for a permissible purpose is a “consumer report” regardless of whether the data broker knew or should have known the user would use it for that purpose, or intended the user to use it for that purpose; data brokers that sell certain types of consumer data (e.g., data typically used for credit and employment eligibility determinations) are selling consumer reports; a data broker that collects consumer information for permissible purposes may not sell it for non-permissible purposes; and a data broker may not obtain consumer report information from a consumer reporting agency without a permissible purpose or sell such information to a user unless the user has a permissible purpose.

Currently, some data brokers that collect, aggregate, sell, resell, license, or otherwise share personal information about consumers with other parties act as consumer reporting agencies under the statute, but others that engage in very similar activities or sell the same types of data do not. By engaging in these activities outside of the FCRA's protections regarding, for example, data confidentiality and accuracy, these companies threaten consumer privacy and arguably evade the FCRA's purposes and objectives.

As noted above, one of the CFPB's proposals under consideration would provide that a data broker that sells certain types of consumer data would be a consumer reporting agency. Under such a proposal, the CFPB would provide that a data broker's sale of data regarding a consumer's payment history, income, and criminal records, for example, would generally be a consumer report, regardless of the purpose for which the data was actually used or collected, or the expectations of that data broker, because that type of data is typically used for credit and employment determinations (both permissible purposes).²⁰ A data broker "assembling or evaluating" and selling such data would be a consumer reporting agency (assuming the other elements of the definition of consumer reporting agency were satisfied) because it would be assembling or evaluating information on consumers for the purpose of furnishing consumer reports to third parties.²¹

The proposals under consideration also would mean that the sale of data addressed in the proposals by data brokers that qualify as consumer reporting agencies under the proposals would be prohibited without the written instructions of the consumer or another permissible purpose. That prohibition would extend, for example, to selling such data for marketing (except as permitted for prescreening under FCRA section 604\(c\)). The CFPB is also considering other interpretations clarifying when and how data brokers are or would be consumer reporting agencies furnishing consumer reports.

For the proposals under consideration, please provide feedback on questions 1 through 7 above and the following questions:

Q8. If the CFPB proposes the approaches described above, what types of entities would fall within the definition of "consumer reporting agency"? Are there

²⁰ Such a sale of data would not be a consumer report if a statutory exclusion applies, such as if the data consists of "information solely as to transactions or experiences" between the consumer and the data broker. See 15 U.S.C. 1681a\(d\)\(2\)\(A\)\(i\).

²¹ This particular proposal would not cover data types that are only infrequently used to make eligibility determinations, such as alternative data used to make credit decisions. Nevertheless, an entity selling such data could still be a consumer reporting agency (assuming the other elements of the definition were satisfied) if the data were actually collected, used, or expected to be used for a permissible purpose. Other proposals the CFPB is considering, as described above, would address the application of the FCRA in these circumstances, including to codify existing law.

certain types of entities that should not fall within the definition of “consumer reporting agency”?

- Q9. If consumer data communicated to a third party and used by the third party for credit decisions, employment purposes, insurance decisions, or other permissible purposes were a consumer report regardless of the data broker’s knowledge or intent concerning the third party’s use of the data, what costs would entities selling such data incur to monitor or control how their customers use purchased data?
- Q10. If the CFPB proposes the approach described above with respect to data brokers that sell certain types of data, would it be sufficient to provide a standard for (or guidelines about) what types of data are “typically” used for an FCRA-covered purpose or should the CFPB provide a list of such data types? What standard, guidelines, or data types should the CFPB consider for each FCRA-covered purpose?
- Q11. Are there other ways in which the CFPB should be thinking about how and when data broker data should be considered a consumer report furnished by a consumer reporting agency?
- Q12. If any of the proposals under consideration that would make a data broker subject to the FCRA as a consumer reporting agency were finalized, do you anticipate that your firm or your customers will seek to obtain consumer consent before providing consumer reports to third parties? If so, what challenges do you foresee with obtaining consumer consent?
- Q13. What costs do you believe the proposal under consideration would be likely to impose on the entities from which your firm obtains consumer data (known as “furnishers” under the FCRA) and on the entities to which your firm provides consumer data (known as “users” under the FCRA)? Are there additional burdens or unintended consequences to such entities the CFPB should consider? What steps could the CFPB take to reduce or lessen those potential impacts?

2. Defining “assembling or evaluating”

Data brokers that facilitate consumer-authorized data sharing by accessing consumer information held by data providers and communicating it to third party data recipients are typically engaged in activities that constitute “assembling or evaluating” consumer information under existing precedent; thus, where they otherwise satisfy the definition of “consumer reporting agency,” they are subject to the FCRA.

Other entities that facilitate electronic data access between parties may also engage in “assembling or evaluating” information when they act as intermediaries or vendors (e.g., by transmitting public records information from public records databases to users) or otherwise transmit consumer data electronically between data sources and users. The CFPB is considering a proposal to provide a more bright-line definition for when such entities’ activities fall within the meaning of the terms “assembling” and “evaluating” in the definition of “consumer reporting agency.” The CFPB’s proposal under consideration would address when such companies’ activities constitute “assembling or evaluating” and would provide that, if such companies are “assembling or evaluating” and otherwise meet the definition of “consumer reporting agency,” they would be consumer reporting agencies under FCRA section 603\(f\).

For the proposal under consideration, please provide feedback on questions 1 through 7 above and the following questions:

- Q14. What are the types of intermediaries, vendors, and other entities that transmit consumer data electronically between data sources and users? For any such company, describe the types of information the company obtains, from which data sources, who determines the sources of information to use, and how the information is transmitted, used, interpreted, or modified by the company.
- Q15. Are there any circumstances under which the activities of an intermediary, vendor, or other entity that transmits consumer data electronically does not create a risk of harm to a consumer?

3. “Credit header” data

“Credit header” data are certain consumer-identifying data maintained by consumer reporting agencies. Credit header data has historically been considered to include, for example, an individual’s name (and any other names previously used), current and former addresses, Social Security number, and phone numbers.

The CFPB is aware that some consumer reporting agencies sell credit header data for purposes not authorized under the FCRA, such as marketing or certain law enforcement purposes. The CFPB also recognizes that the evolution and expansion of the consumer data marketplace, as well as increased computing power and increased reliance on complex algorithms to identify insights, has resulted in credit header data being used more frequently for eligibility determinations and that this information may bear on a consumer’s personal characteristics or other enumerated factors in ways not currently recognized by consumer reporting agencies.

The CFPB is considering a proposal to clarify the extent to which credit header data constitutes a consumer report. The proposal under consideration would likely reduce, perhaps significantly, consumer reporting agencies’ ability to sell or otherwise disclose credit header data from their consumer reporting databases without a permissible purpose.

For the proposal under consideration, please provide feedback on questions 1 through 7 above and the following questions:

- Q16. What types of information do firms typically consider to be credit header data? What types of credit header data are typically sold or purchased and for what purpose(s)? How is data collected for those purposes and how is it stored?
- Q17. Under what circumstances do firms typically consider the sale or purchase of credit header data not to be a consumer report, and why? What costs would be incurred if such sales or purchases of credit header data were to be considered a consumer report?

- Q18. If the CFPB proposes a rule clarifying when credit header data is a consumer report, are there certain categories of credit header data you believe should be included or excluded as a consumer report? If so, under what circumstances?

4. Targeted marketing and aggregated data

The FCRA prohibits consumer reporting agencies from furnishing consumer reports to third parties except for certain statutorily enumerated permissible purposes. Marketing and advertising generally are not an FCRA permissible purpose.²² The FCRA thus generally prohibits consumer reporting agencies from furnishing consumer reports to third parties for marketing or advertising purposes, such as to target a consumer with an invitation to apply for credit. The CFPB is considering proposals to clarify that certain activities consumer reporting agencies undertake to help third-party users market to consumers violate this prohibition.

For example, a consumer reporting agency might use information from consumer reports and its other databases, combined with information from a third party, such as a set of consumer attributes or a list of consumer names, to enable the third party to better target individual consumers for a particular marketing or advertising campaign. The consumer reporting agency might then deliver the marketing material or advertising campaign on behalf of the third party to the specific consumers identified for targeting. Because the consumer reporting agency is not directly providing information to a third party, it may believe that no consumer report has been “furnished” and therefore that the activity is permissible under the FCRA. The CFPB is considering proposals that would provide that, in this scenario or in similar circumstances where a consumer reporting agency uses consumer report information on behalf of a third party, a consumer reporting agency has furnished a consumer report on a consumer to a user without a permissible purpose.

In other instances, a consumer reporting agency might share, for marketing or other purposes, consumer report information that has been “aggregated” and wrongly assume that it is not a consumer report simply because the information is aggregated. For example, a consumer reporting agency might share household-level data, or data aggregated at broader geographic levels, that relate to a consumer. The CFPB is considering proposals to clarify whether and when aggregated or anonymized consumer report information constitutes or does not constitute a consumer report.

For the proposals under consideration, please provide feedback on questions 1 through 7 above and the following questions:

- Q19. What is your understanding of how consumer reporting agencies or service providers perform marketing or advertising services on behalf of third-party users? What services are performed (e.g., identification of target audiences, delivery of marketing or advertising materials to consumers)? What data are relied on to perform these services, and do firms typically consider such data to be protected by the FCRA? Why or why not?

- Q20. What is your understanding of how firms share consumer report information in marketing or advertising platforms? What capabilities do these platforms offer to third-party users for targeting marketing or advertising campaigns? What steps do firms typically take to prevent consumer report information from being used for impermissible purposes under the FCRA?
- Q21. What is your knowledge about products that include aggregated data drawn from consumer reporting databases? For what purposes do firms typically use or offer the products? What type of information is aggregated? How is the aggregation done? At what level are the data aggregated?
- Q22. Do firms typically consider aggregated data products they use or offer to be consumer reports? Why or why not?
- Q23. Is there a level of aggregation of consumer report information at which consumer privacy would not be implicated? Are you aware of instances in which aggregated information that is drawn from a consumer reporting database is later linked back by a third party to specific consumers, for example when a consumer responds to an advertisement?

B. Permissible purposes

One of the FCRA's principal goals is to protect consumer privacy.²³ The statute seeks to accomplish this by, among other things, prohibiting consumer reporting agencies from furnishing consumer reports to third parties except for certain statutorily enumerated "permissible purposes." The proposals under consideration would interpret certain of those permissible purposes and clarify circumstances in which data breaches may result in a consumer reporting agency violating the FCRA's permissible purpose provision.

1. Written instructions of the consumer

FCRA section 604\(a\)\(2\)²⁴ states that a consumer reporting agency has a permissible purpose to furnish a consumer report if the report is provided "[i]n accordance with the written instructions of the consumer to whom it relates."

The CFPB is considering proposals to address what is needed for a consumer report to be furnished by a consumer reporting agency in accordance with the consumer's written instructions under FCRA section 604(a)(2). The proposals under consideration include proposals concerning the steps companies must take to obtain a consumer's written instructions, who can collect written instructions, limits on the scope of authorization to ensure the consumer has authorized all uses of the consumer’s data (including limits on the number of purposes or entities that can be covered by a single instruction), and methods for revoking any ongoing authorization.

For the proposal under consideration, please provide feedback on questions 1 through 7 above and the following questions:

- Q24. Describe the consumer authorizations or certifications of written instruction typically relied upon to furnish or obtain consumer reports pursuant to this permissible purpose. How specific are these authorizations, and if your firm relies on the certification of a user, does the user disclose the language of the consumer’s authorization? How can a consumer revoke or modify their authorization? What are the products or services offered to consumers for which your firm relies on the written instructions of the consumer to obtain a consumer report?
- Q25. What should the CFPB take into consideration when evaluating proposals to ensure that consumers understand the scope and import of their authorization to furnish or obtain their consumer report?
- Q26. If your firm requires consumer authorization to furnish or obtain consumer reports, what methods (e.g., electronic signature, check box, wet-ink signature, etc.) does your firm use to document the consumer’s instructions or authorization? What feedback has your firm received from consumers regarding the convenience or challenges caused by such methods, if any?

2. Legitimate business need

FCRA section 604\(a\)\(3\)\(F\)²⁵ provides that a consumer reporting agency may furnish a consumer report to a person if it has reason to believe that the person “otherwise has a legitimate business need for the information—(i) in connection with a business transaction that is initiated by the consumer; or (ii) to review an account to determine whether the consumer continues to meet the terms of the account.”

Some users may invoke the section 604(a)(3)(F)(i) permissible purpose to justify obtaining and using consumer reports for purposes other than determining a consumer’s eligibility for a transaction. In addition, some users may invoke the section 604(a)(3)(F)(ii) permissible purpose when a consumer report is not necessary to make a decision about whether a consumer continues to meet the terms of an account.

The CFPB is considering a proposal to specify that: (1) FCRA section 604(a)(3)(F)(i) requires a transaction to have been initiated by the consumer for personal, family, or household purposes and permits use of consumer reports only for the purpose of determining the consumer’s eligibility for the business transaction, and (2) FCRA section 604(a)(3)(F)(ii) requires that there is an account review for which the use of a consumer report is actually needed to make a decision about whether the consumer continues to meet the terms of the account.

For the proposal under consideration, please provide feedback on questions 1 through 7 above and the following questions:

- Q27. Under what circumstances do firms currently use the legitimate business need permissible purpose in connection with consumer-initiated business transactions and account reviews?
- Q28. Would the proposal under consideration limit your firm's ability to get consumer reports? If so, how? Would it be feasible for your firm instead to rely on the written instruction permissible purpose or some other permissible purpose?

3. Data security and data breaches

The CFPB is considering a proposal to address a consumer reporting agency's obligation under the FCRA to protect consumer reports from unauthorized third-party access. FCRA section 604²⁶ prohibits a consumer reporting agency from furnishing a consumer report other than under the circumstances described in that section. FCRA section 607\(a\)²⁷ requires consumer reporting agencies to maintain reasonable procedures designed to limit the furnishing of consumer reports to the permissible purposes listed in FCRA section 604. Section 607(a) also prohibits a consumer reporting agency from furnishing a consumer report to any person "if it has reasonable grounds for believing that the consumer report will not be used for a permissible purpose listed in" section 604.

The CFPB understands that some consumer reporting agencies may operate consumer reporting databases without adequate or reasonable data security safeguards, exposing consumer report data to unauthorized access and increasing the risk of identity theft, fraud, and other consumer harms. The CFPB is aware that unauthorized users have gained access to consumer reports maintained by consumer reporting agencies on a number of occasions.

The CFPB is considering a proposal to address a consumer reporting agency's obligation under the FCRA to protect consumer reports from a data breach or unauthorized access. For example, the CFPB is considering providing that failure to protect against unauthorized access to consumer reports by third parties may violate FCRA sections 604 or 607(a).

For the proposal under consideration, please provide feedback on questions 1 through 7 above and the following question:

- Q29. What data security improvements, and associated costs, would consumer reporting agencies incur if they were liable under the FCRA for all data breaches?

²⁶ 15 U.S.C. 1681b.

²⁷ 15 U.S.C. 1681e\(a\).

C. Disputes

Consumers have two avenues to dispute the completeness or accuracy of information contained in their consumer reports. First, FCRA section 611\(a\)\(1\)²⁸ permits a consumer to file a dispute with a consumer reporting agency as to the completeness or accuracy of their file. Second, FCRA section 623\(a\)\(8\)²⁹ and Regulation V allow a consumer to file a dispute directly with the entity that furnished the disputed information.

FCRA section 611(a) requires a consumer reporting agency that receives a dispute to investigate it and respond within certain time periods. The consumer reporting agency must also notify the furnisher of the information of the dispute.³⁰ Whether a furnisher receives a dispute directly from a consumer or indirectly through a consumer reporting agency, the FCRA and Regulation V require the furnisher to investigate the dispute and respond within certain time periods.³¹

Consumer complaints to the CFPB reflect how costly, ineffective, and time-consuming the consumer reporting dispute process can be for consumers. In each of the past three calendar years, the top two most frequently identified issues in complaints submitted to the CFPB were “Incorrect information on your report” and “Problem with a credit reporting company’s investigation into an existing problem.”³² The CFPB is considering proposals related to two types of disputes: (1) those that are classified by a consumer reporting agency or furnisher as involving legal matters and (2) those involving systemic issues at a consumer reporting agency or furnisher.

1. Disputes involving legal matters

The CFPB understands that some consumer reporting agencies and furnishers have attempted to distinguish between “legal” and “factual” disputes and have asserted that the FCRA requires consumer reporting agencies and furnishers to investigate only “factual” disputes. The FCRA does not distinguish between legal and factual disputes, and accordingly it does not exempt “legal disputes” from its requirement that consumer reporting agencies and furnishers must reasonably investigate disputes. For example, the CFPB has previously stated the FCRA dispute provisions cover state foreclosure law interpretation disputes regarding whether a reported debt is collectible³³ and contractual liability disputes regarding obligations to pay.³⁴ The CFPB is considering a proposal to codify this interpretation.

For the proposal under consideration, please provide feedback on questions 1 through 7 above and the following questions:

- Q30. Do you have knowledge about the practice of distinguishing between disputes classified as relating to legal issues and those classified as relating to factual issues, and if so, how do those that engage in this practice distinguish these types of disputes? Do they process or handle the disputes differently, and if so, what are the differences?
- Q31. What portion of your firm’s annual disputes relate to legal issues, and what policies and procedures are in place related to disputes your firm classifies as relating to legal issues?

2. Disputes involving systemic issues

The CFPB is considering proposals concerning disputes that relate to systemic issues affecting the completeness or accuracy of data furnished to consumer reporting agencies and included in consumer reports. Specifically, the CFPB is considering proposals that would address how furnishers and consumer reporting agencies must investigate and address such systemic issues. The CFPB is also considering whether to provide consumers with a specific process through which they could notify a consumer reporting agency or furnisher of possible systemic consumer reporting issues that affect other similarly situated consumers. These proposals could facilitate consumers’ ability to receive collective relief from consumer reporting agencies and furnishers that do not appropriately address systemic issues.

A systemic issue at any consumer reporting agency or furnisher can lead to errors on the consumer reports of numerous consumers. For example, the CFPB has taken enforcement action regarding furnisher errors caused by systemic issues that affected significant numbers of consumers, such as outdated software and deficiencies in a furnisher’s policies and procedures.³⁵

May 5, 2022), cfpb_sessa-v-trans-union-llc_amicus-brief_2022-05.pdf.

³⁵ Systemic issues generally can lead to widespread errors on consumer reports and affect significant numbers of consumers. See, e.g., CFPB Orders CarHop to Pay $6.4 Million Penalty for Jeopardizing Consumers’ Credit (Dec. 17, 2015), <https://www.consumerfinance.gov/about-us/newsroom/cfpb-orders-carhop-to-pay-6-4-million-penalty-for-jeopardizing-consumers-credit/> (describing a “buy-here, pay-here” auto dealer and its affiliated financing company’s failure to establish and implement reasonable written policies and procedures regarding the accuracy and integrity of the consumer information that the financing company furnished to consumer reporting agencies as a significant systemic deficiency that increased the risk of, and likely contributed to, numerous furnishing errors, failures, and problems).

Accordingly, the CFPB is considering a proposal to address what a consumer reporting agency and a furnisher must do, pursuant to their obligations under FCRA sections 611 and 623, upon receiving a dispute from a consumer that indicates that there is a systemic issue that could be affecting the completeness or accuracy of consumer reports involving multiple consumers. The CFPB is considering, for example, whether to: require furnishers and/or consumer reporting agencies to determine as part of their investigation of such disputes whether there is a systemic issue and to correct any inaccurate reporting on behalf of all affected consumers; and specify how the results of any such investigation should be communicated, including, for example, whether notice should be provided to consumers who may be affected by systemic issues identified in a dispute that was submitted by another consumer. The CFPB is also considering whether to provide a rubric or template that consumers could use to submit disputes relating to systemic issues affecting multiple consumers, to facilitate the submission of such disputes.

For the proposals under consideration, please provide feedback on questions 1 through 7 above and the following questions:

- Q32. How might the CFPB define “systemic” issues for purposes of the proposals it is considering? What may be the cause(s) for a furnisher or consumer reporting agency to have erroneous reporting for multiple consumers of the same type (e.g., issues with common processes, policies and procedures, infrastructure limitations, training)? How does your firm become aware of systemic issues that cause consumer reporting errors?
- Q33. If furnishers or consumer reporting agencies (or both) investigate and address systemic issues that may be causing consumer reporting errors affecting multiple consumers, based upon a single consumer’s notice of dispute, what kind of notice should go to other potentially similarly situated consumers affected by the systemic issue? At what point(s) of the process? What should that notice(s) say?
- Q34. What kind of information would be helpful for a consumer to include in a dispute notice to your firm to determine whether an error may be caused by a systemic issue?

D. Medical debt collection information

The CFPB has long-standing concerns about the usefulness of medical debt collections tradeline information in predicting a consumer’s creditworthiness. For example, research by the CFPB and others has raised questions about the predictive value of this information.³⁶ Nevertheless, medical debt collection tradelines have historically been the most common debt collection tradelines on consumer reports.³⁷ Medical debt collection tradelines appearing on consumer Bureau, Market Snapshot: An Update on Third-Party Debt Collections Tradelines Reporting, at 3 (Feb. 2023), https://files.consumerfinance.gov/f/documents/cfpb_market-snapshot-third-party-debt-collections-tradelines-reporting_2023-02.pdf (looking at debt collection tradeline data from 2018 to Q1 2022). reports can have negative consequences for consumers, including impacting consumers' ability to obtain credit (or to obtain it at favorable rates) after experiencing, for example, a medical emergency. They can also be used as leverage by collectors to coerce consumers to pay sometimes spurious or false unpaid medical bills.

Congress, too, has raised concerns with the presence of medical debt information on credit reports. In the FCRA, Congress restricted creditors' ability to obtain or use medical debts in credit decisions³⁸, but it granted the Federal banking agencies and the National Credit Union Administration authority to create regulatory exemptions to that restriction. Those agencies promulgated exemptions, including one for medical debt financial information, which is primarily used by creditors to consider medical debts in underwriting decisions. When the CFPB was created, Congress transferred this authority to the CFPB. In 2011, the CFPB republished, in general with only technical and conforming changes, the consumer financial protection regulations it inherited from other agencies under the Dodd-Frank Act, including Regulation V for consumer reporting. As part of that process, the CFPB republished without substantive change the medical debt financial information exemption in Regulation V § 1022.30\(d\).³⁹

The CFPB is considering proposals to: (1) revise Regulation V § 1022.30(d), to modify the exemption such that creditors are prohibited from obtaining or using medical debt collection information to make determinations about consumers' credit eligibility (or continued credit eligibility) and (2) prohibit consumer reporting agencies from including medical debt collection tradelines on consumer reports furnished to creditors for purposes of making credit eligibility determinations.

For each of the proposals under consideration, please provide feedback on questions 1 through 7 above and the following questions:

- Q35. Under the proposals under consideration, would you anticipate that medical debt collectors would stop furnishing medical debt collection information to consumer reporting agencies and use alternative debt collection methods? If so, which ones?
- Q36. To what extent do creditors currently use medical debt collection information when making credit eligibility determinations, including to comply with other laws or requirements? Do creditors use medical debt collection information for other purposes in connection with a credit transaction?
- Q37. From what sources do creditors obtain consumers' medical debt collection information, other than consumer reports?

- Q38. What are the pros and cons of an alternative approach of mandating a delay in the furnishing and reporting of medical debt for a particular period of time, and not reporting or furnishing medical debt below a particular dollar amount?
- Q39. What are the pros and cons of an alternative approach of requiring consumer reporting agencies and furnishers, upon receiving a dispute, to conduct an independent investigation to certify that a disputed medical debt is accurate and not subject to pending insurance disputes?

E. Implementation period

The CFPB seeks to ensure that consumers promptly benefit from a final rule and that covered entities have sufficient time to implement the rule. As such, the CFPB is considering the proper implementation period for complying with a rule finalizing the proposals under consideration.

To assist industry with an efficient and effective implementation of any final rule, the CFPB intends to provide guidance in the form of plain language compliance guides and aids, and by conducting meetings with stakeholders to discuss the rule and implementation issues.

- Q40. Please provide input on an appropriate implementation period for complying with a rule finalizing the proposals under consideration. Are there any aspects of the CFPB's proposals under consideration that could be particularly time consuming or costly to implement? Are any of these challenges particular to small entities? Are there any factors outside a covered entity's control that would affect its ability to prepare for compliance?

IV. Potential Impacts on Small Entities

A. Overview

As discussed above, Federal law requires the CFPB to consider the economic impact that rules will have on small entities. In Part III above, the CFPB describes the proposals under consideration and asks a number of questions about each, many of which relate to potential impacts on small entities.

In this Part IV, the CFPB discusses the general framework under which it currently believes it can best assess the potential impacts of the proposals under consideration on small entities. This information is intended to help small entity representatives and others offer the CFPB additional data and information regarding potential impacts. The CFPB encourages contributions of data and other factual information to inform its assessment of potential compliance costs and other impacts on small entities. In addition to seeking supporting data and information concerning costs and impacts of the proposals under consideration, the CFPB also seeks feedback on the framework discussed here.

B. Small entities covered by the proposals under consideration

This section aims to quantify the number of small entities that may be affected by the proposals under consideration. Doing so requires determining whether an entity would be affected and whether it is small. As discussed above, the entities subject to the proposals under consideration include (1) entities that meet (or would meet, if the proposals were adopted) the definition of consumer reporting agency in FCRA section 603\(f\)⁴⁰, (2) entities that furnish information to consumer reporting agencies, and (3) creditors that use medical debt collection information in making credit eligibility determinations. These entities will include consumer reporting agencies, data brokers, data aggregators, data furnishers, and creditors that use medical debt information in credit eligibility or continued credit eligibility determinations. An entity can be classified in multiple categories.

Second, the CFPB adopts the Small Business Administration’s industry-specific size standards for determining which entities are “small.” The following table lists the industries that may be affected by the proposals under consideration, in order of North American Industry Classification System (NAICS) code⁴¹, along with the number of entities in each category and the percent of small entities for that category.

NAICS Codes	NAICS Description	Total Number of Entities	Number of Small Entities	Percent Small	Small Business Administration Size Standard ($ Million)

⁴¹ The Regulatory Flexibility Act defines “small entities” as small businesses, small organizations, and small governmental jurisdictions. 5 U.S.C. 601(6). The term “small business” has the same meaning as “small business concern” under section 3 of the Small Business Act. 5 U.S.C. 601(3). The term “small organization” is defined as any not-for-profit enterprise which is independently owned and operated and is not dominant in its field. 5 U.S.C. 601(4). The term “small governmental jurisdiction” is defined as the governments of cities, counties, towns, townships, villages, school districts, or special districts, with a population of less than 50,000. 5 U.S.C. 601(5). The Small Business Administration has developed size standards to carry out the purposes of the Small Business Act and those size standards can be found in 13 CFR 121.201. A link to those size standards is available at <https://www.sba.gov/document/support-table-size-standards>. Table B.1 lists NAICS codes from 2017.

Q41. Please provide feedback on the CFPB’s understanding of the small entities that could be affected by the proposals under consideration.

C. CFPB review of implementation processes and costs

For the CFPB to assess the economic impacts of the proposals under consideration, it needs information on the FCRA compliance systems currently in place at small entities, and on the projected compliance implementation processes and associated one-time and ongoing costs that small entities would likely incur if the proposals were adopted. This section describes the general implementation processes and costs that the CFPB believes the proposals under consideration would impose on small entities. In general, the CFPB believes that the implementation processes and costs would differ depending on whether a small entity currently complies with the FCRA.

Q42. For the proposals under consideration that are relevant to their businesses, small entity representatives are encouraged to provide specific estimates, information, and data on the projected one-time and ongoing costs of compliance if the proposals were adopted. Information and data on current FCRA compliance costs (baseline costs) will be valuable as well.

1. Costs imposed on entities not currently complying with the FCRA

The proposals under consideration in part III.A.1 (data brokers) and A.2 (assembling and evaluating) would require certain small entities that currently do not comply with the FCRA to begin doing so. Such small entities would be required to comply with the FCRA, and Regulation V as amended by any CFPB final rule (i.e., including all the other proposals under consideration, if adopted and to the extent applicable to the small entity's business). The CFPB expects that many of these entities do not have FCRA-compliant systems, processes, and policies and procedures in place and will incur a one-time cost to develop them, and ongoing costs to maintain them. The requirements of such systems, processes, and policies and procedures will depend on whether the small entity is a consumer reporting agency or a furnisher. These entities would also be subject to liability under the FCRA, which could cause them to incur costs related to FCRA litigation.

2. Costs imposed on entities currently complying with the FCRA

The proposals under consideration in part III.A.3 (credit header), A.4 (targeted marketing and aggregated data), B (permissible purposes), C (disputes), and D (medical debt collection information) would also impose one-time and ongoing compliance costs, as applicable, on entities that currently comply with the FCRA and Regulation V. The CFPB expects consumer reporting agencies to have systems, processes, and policies and procedures in place to ensure that consumer reports are only furnished for permissible purposes, and expects consumer reporting agencies and furnishers to have systems, processes, and policies and procedures to handle disputes as required by the FCRA and Regulation V. There may be one-time costs to update these systems, processes, and policies and procedures for compliance with the proposals under consideration as well as ongoing costs, for example to manage increases in the number of disputes. The medical debt collection proposals under consideration may impose one-time costs on some consumer reporting agencies to remove all medical debt collection tradelines from certain consumer reports, and one-time and ongoing costs on creditors to change their underwriting practices and models.

D. Consideration of the impacts on business operation and revenues

In addition to the one-time and ongoing compliance costs that small entities would likely incur if the proposals under consideration are adopted, the CFPB must also consider how the proposals under consideration could impact the business operations and revenues of the affected entities. The CFPB will use this information to measure the change expected if the proposals are adopted.

For example, data brokers that currently profit from the sale of certain data without a permissible purpose may experience a reduction in revenue from the restriction of such sales under the proposals under consideration. Similarly, consumer reporting agencies that currently profit from the sale of credit header data to users without a permissible purpose may under certain circumstances experience a reduction in revenue from the restriction of such sale under the proposals under consideration. Further, consumer reporting agencies that engage in certain marketing activities or sell aggregated data for marketing may experience a reduction in revenue under the proposals under consideration. Also, creditors could incur ongoing costs related to the exclusion of medical debt collection information from underwriting to the extent that it negatively affects their ability to predict risk of default.

- Q43. For each of the proposals under consideration above, do you expect that your firm would restrict or eliminate any product or service offerings to comply with the rule? If so, how would the proposals impact those products or services?
- Q44. For each of the proposals under consideration above, please provide information, data, and/or estimates of impacts to your firm's business operations and revenue, including to both current operations and revenues and to future operations and revenues that could potentially be lost.

E. Additional impacts of proposals under consideration

There may be additional impacts of the proposals under consideration not discussed above. Given the breadth of proposals under consideration, the CFPB is requesting that small entity representatives provide additional information and data on impacts not discussed, including benefits that small entities may experience from the proposals.

- Q45. What other, additional impacts do you think might occur that have not been covered above?
- Q46. What benefits do you expect small entities may experience from any of the proposals under consideration listed above?

F. Impact on the cost and availability of credit to small entities

The CFPB is requesting that small entity representatives provide information and/or data on any expected impacts on cost and availability of credit to small entities.

- Q47. Would the proposals under consideration affect the cost and availability of credit to small entities?

It is the purpose of this subchapter to require that consumer reporting agencies adopt reasonable procedures for meeting the needs of commerce for consumer credit, personnel, insurance, and other information in a manner which is fair and equitable to the consumer, with regard to the confidentiality, accuracy, relevancy, and proper utilization of such information in accordance with the requirements of this subchapter.

- (ii) in the case of a request that is by mail, 3 business days after receiving the request for removal.

(D) Third-party requests

If a third party requests access to a consumer report of a consumer with respect to which a security freeze is in effect, where such request is in connection with an application for credit, and the consumer does not allow such consumer report to be accessed, the third party may treat the application as incomplete.

(E) Temporary removal of security freeze

Upon receiving a direct request from a consumer under subparagraph (A)(i), if the consumer requests a temporary removal of a security freeze, the consumer reporting agency shall, in accordance with subparagraph (C), remove the security freeze for the period of time specified by the consumer.

- (A) A person or entity, or a subsidiary, affiliate, or agent of that person or entity, or an assignee of a financial obligation owed by the consumer to that person or entity, or a prospective assignee of a financial obligation owed by the consumer to that person or entity in conjunction with the proposed purchase of the financial obligation, with which the consumer has or had prior to assignment an account or contract including a demand deposit account, or to whom the consumer issued a negotiable instrument, for the purposes of reviewing the account or collecting the financial obligation owed for the account, contract, or negotiable instrument. For purposes of this subparagraph, “reviewing the account” includes activities related to account maintenance, monitoring, credit line increases, and account upgrades and enhancements.

(5) Notice of rights

At any time a consumer is required to receive a summary of rights required under section 1681g of this title, the following notice shall be included:

“CONSUMERS HAVE THE RIGHT TO OBTAIN A SECURITY FREEZE

“You have a right to place a ‘security freeze’ on your credit report, which will prohibit a consumer reporting agency from releasing information in your credit report without your express authorization. The security freeze is designed to prevent credit, loans, and services from being approved in your name without your consent. However, you should be aware that using a security freeze to take control over who gets access to the personal and financial information in your credit report may delay, interfere with, or prohibit the timely approval of any subsequent request or application you make regarding a new loan, credit, mortgage, or any other account involving the extension of credit.

“As an alternative to a security freeze, you have the right to place an initial or extended fraud alert on your credit file at no cost. An initial fraud alert is a 1-year alert that is placed on a consumer's credit file. Upon seeing a fraud alert display on a consumer's credit file, a business is required to take steps to verify the consumer's identity before extending new credit. If you are a victim of identity theft, you are entitled to an extended fraud alert, which is a fraud alert lasting 7 years.

“A security freeze does not apply to a person or entity, or its affiliates, or collection agencies acting on behalf of the person or entity, with which you have an existing account that requests information in your credit report for the purposes of reviewing or collecting the account. Reviewing the account includes activities related to account maintenance, monitoring, credit line increases, and account upgrades and enhancements.”

(6) Webpage

A consumer reporting agency shall establish a webpage that—

(iv) allows a consumer to request an active duty fraud alert;

(v) allows a consumer to opt-out of the use of information in a consumer report to send the consumer a solicitation of credit or insurance, in accordance with section 1681m(d) of this title; and

(vi) shall not be the only mechanism by which a consumer may request a security freeze.

The Director or the Director's designee may make such a certification only if the Director or the Director's designee has determined in writing, that such information is sought for the conduct of an authorized investigation to protect against international terrorism or clandestine intelligence activities, provided that such an investigation of a United States person is not conducted solely upon the basis of activities protected by the first amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

(b) Identifying information

Notwithstanding the provisions of section 1681b of this title or any other provision of this subchapter, a consumer reporting agency shall furnish identifying information respecting a consumer, limited to name, address, former addresses, places of employment, or former places of employment, to the Federal Bureau of Investigation when presented with a written request that includes a term that specifically identifies a consumer or account to be used as the basis for the production of that information, signed by the Director or the Director's designee in a position not lower than Deputy Assistant Director at Bureau headquarters or a Special Agent in Charge of a Bureau field office designated by the Director, which certifies compliance with this subsection. Appendix B—Excerpt from Regulation V, 12 CFR 1022⁸⁴

§ 1022.30 Obtaining or using medical information in connection with a determination of eligibility for credit.

(a) Scope. This section applies to any person that participates as a creditor in a transaction, except for a person excluded from coverage of this part by section 1029 of the Consumer Financial Protection Act of 2010, title X of the Dodd-Frank Wall Street Reform and Consumer Protection Act, Public Law 111–203, 124 Stat. 137.

(b) General prohibition on obtaining or using medical information —

(1) In general. A creditor may not obtain or use medical information pertaining to a consumer in connection with any determination of the consumer's eligibility, or continued eligibility, for credit, except as provided in this section.

(2) Definitions.

(i) Credit has the same meaning as in section 702 of the Equal Credit Opportunity Act, 15 U.S.C. 1691a.

(ii) Creditor has the same meaning as in section 702 of the Equal Credit Opportunity Act, 15 U.S.C. 1691a.

(iii) Eligibility, or continued eligibility, for credit means the consumer's qualification or fitness to receive, or continue to receive, credit, including the terms on which credit is offered. The term does not include:

(A) Any determination of the consumer's qualification or fitness for employment, insurance (other than a credit insurance product), or other non-credit products or services;

(B) Authorizing, processing, or documenting a payment or transaction on behalf of the consumer in a manner that does not involve a determination of the consumer's eligibility, or continued eligibility, for credit; or

(C) Maintaining or servicing the consumer's account in a manner that does not involve a determination of the consumer's eligibility, or continued eligibility, for credit.

(c) Rule of construction for obtaining and using unsolicited medical information —

(1) In general. A creditor does not obtain medical information in violation of the prohibition if it receives medical information pertaining to a consumer in connection with any determination of the consumer's eligibility, or continued eligibility, for credit without specifically requesting medical information.

(2) Use of unsolicited medical information. A creditor that receives unsolicited medical information in the manner described in paragraph \(c\)\(1\) of this section may use that information in connection with any determination of the consumer's eligibility, or continued eligibility, for credit to the extent the creditor can rely on at least one of the exceptions in § 1022.30(d) or \(e\).

(3) Examples. A creditor does not obtain medical information in violation of the prohibition if, for example:

(i) In response to a general question regarding a consumer's debts or expenses, the creditor receives information that the consumer owes a debt to a hospital.

(ii) In a conversation with the creditor's loan officer, the consumer informs the creditor that the consumer has a particular medical condition.

(iii) In connection with a consumer's application for an extension of credit, the creditor requests a consumer report from a consumer reporting agency and receives medical information in the consumer report furnished by the agency even though the creditor did not specifically request medical information from the consumer reporting agency.

(d) Financial information exception for obtaining and using medical information —

(1) In general. A creditor may obtain and use medical information pertaining to a consumer in connection with any determination of the consumer's eligibility, or continued eligibility, for credit so long as:

- (i) The information is the type of information routinely used in making credit eligibility determinations, such as information relating to debts, expenses, income, benefits, assets, collateral, or the purpose of the loan, including the use of proceeds;
- (ii) The creditor uses the medical information in a manner and to an extent that is no less favorable than it would use comparable information that is not medical information in a credit transaction; and
- (iii) The creditor does not take the consumer's physical, mental, or behavioral health, condition or history, type of treatment, or prognosis into account as part of any such determination.

(2) Examples —

(i) Examples of the types of information routinely used in making credit eligibility determinations.

Paragraph (d)(1)(i) of this section permits a creditor, for example, to obtain and use information about:

- (A) The dollar amount, repayment terms, repayment history, and similar information regarding medical debts to calculate, measure, or verify the repayment ability of the consumer, the use of proceeds, or the terms for granting credit;
- (B) The value, condition, and lien status of a medical device that may serve as collateral to secure a loan;
- (C) The dollar amount and continued eligibility for disability income, workers' compensation income, or other benefits related to health or a medical condition that is relied on as a source of repayment; or
- (D) The identity of creditors to whom outstanding medical debts are owed in connection with an application for credit, including but not limited to, a transaction involving the consolidation of medical debts.

(ii) Examples of uses of medical information consistent with the exception.

(A) A consumer includes on an application for credit information about two $20,000 debts. One debt is to a hospital; the other debt is to a retailer. The creditor contacts the hospital and the retailer to verify the amount and payment status of the debts. The creditor learns that both debts are more than 90 days past due. Any two debts of this size that are more than 90 days past due would disqualify the consumer under the creditor's established underwriting criteria. The creditor denies the application on the basis that the consumer has a poor repayment history on outstanding debts. The creditor has used medical information in a manner and to an extent no less favorable than it would use comparable non-medical information.

(B) A consumer indicates on an application for a $200,000 mortgage loan that she receives $15,000 in long-term disability income each year from her former employer and has no other income. Annual income of $15,000, regardless of source, would not be sufficient to support the requested amount of credit. The creditor denies the application on the basis that the projected debt-to-income ratio of the consumer does not meet the creditor's underwriting criteria. The creditor has used medical information in a manner and to an extent that is no less favorable than it would use comparable non-medical information.

(C) A consumer includes on an application for a $10,000 home equity loan that he has a $50,000 debt to a medical facility that specializes in treating a potentially terminal disease. The creditor contacts the medical facility to verify the debt and obtain the repayment history and current status of the loan. The creditor learns that the debt is current. The applicant meets the income and other requirements of the creditor's underwriting guidelines. The creditor grants the application. The creditor has used medical information in accordance with the exception.

(iii) Examples of uses of medical information inconsistent with the exception.

(A) A consumer applies for $25,000 of credit and includes on the application information about a $50,000 debt to a hospital. The creditor contacts the hospital to verify the amount and payment status of the debt, and learns that the debt is current and that the consumer has no delinquencies in her repayment history. If the existing debt were instead owed to a retail department store, the creditor would approve the application and extend credit based on the amount and repayment history of the outstanding debt. The creditor, however, denies the application because the consumer is indebted to a hospital. The creditor has used medical information, here the identity of the medical creditor, in a manner and to an extent that is less favorable than it would use comparable non-medical information.

(B) A consumer meets with a loan officer of a creditor to apply for a mortgage loan. While filling out the loan application, the consumer informs the loan officer orally that she has a potentially terminal disease. The consumer meets the creditor's established requirements for the requested mortgage loan. The loan officer recommends to the credit committee that the consumer be denied credit because the consumer has that disease. The credit committee follows the loan officer's recommendation and denies the application because the consumer has a potentially terminal disease. The creditor has used medical information in a manner inconsistent with the exception by taking into account the consumer's physical, mental, or behavioral health, condition, or history, type of treatment, or prognosis as part of a determination of eligibility or continued eligibility for credit.

(C) A consumer who has an apparent medical condition, such as a consumer who uses a wheelchair or an oxygen tank, meets with a loan officer to apply for a home equity loan. The consumer meets the creditor's established requirements for the requested home equity loan and the creditor typically does not require consumers to obtain a debt cancellation contract, debt suspension agreement, or credit insurance product in connection with such loans. However, based on the consumer's apparent medical condition, the loan officer recommends to the credit committee that credit be extended to the consumer only if the consumer obtains a debt cancellation contract, debt suspension agreement, or credit insurance product from a nonaffiliated third party. The credit committee agrees with the loan officer's recommendation. The loan officer informs the consumer that the consumer must obtain a debt cancellation contract, debt suspension agreement, or credit insurance product from a nonaffiliated third party to qualify for the loan. The consumer obtains one of these products and the creditor approves the loan. The creditor has used medical information in a manner inconsistent with the exception by taking into account the consumer's physical, mental, or behavioral health, condition, or history, type of treatment, or prognosis in setting conditions on the consumer's eligibility for credit.

(e) Specific exceptions for obtaining and using medical information —

(1) In general. A creditor may obtain and use medical information pertaining to a consumer in connection with any determination of the consumer's eligibility, or continued eligibility, for credit:

(i) To determine whether the use of a power of attorney or legal representative that is triggered by a medical condition or event is necessary and appropriate or whether the consumer has the legal capacity to contract when a person seeks to exercise a power of attorney or act as legal representative for a consumer based on an asserted medical condition or event;

(ii) To comply with applicable requirements of local, state, or Federal laws;

(iii) To determine, at the consumer's request, whether the consumer qualifies for a legally permissible special credit program or credit-related assistance program that is:

(A) Designed to meet the special needs of consumers with medical conditions; and

(B) Established and administered pursuant to a written plan that:

(1) Identifies the class of persons that the program is designed to benefit; and

(2) Sets forth the procedures and standards for extending credit or providing other credit-related assistance under the program;

(iv) To the extent necessary for purposes of fraud prevention or detection;

(v) In the case of credit for the purpose of financing medical products or services, to determine and verify the medical purpose of a loan and the use of proceeds;

(vi) Consistent with safe and sound practices, if the consumer or the consumer's legal representative specifically requests that the creditor use medical information in determining the consumer's eligibility, or continued eligibility, for credit, to accommodate the consumer's particular circumstances, and such request is documented by the creditor;

(vii) Consistent with safe and sound practices, to determine whether the provisions of a forbearance practice or program that is triggered by a medical condition or event apply to a consumer;

(viii) To determine the consumer's eligibility for, the triggering of, or the reactivation of a debt cancellation contract or debt suspension agreement if a medical condition or event is a triggering event for the provision of benefits under the contract or agreement; or

(ix) To determine the consumer's eligibility for, the triggering of, or the reactivation of a credit insurance product if a medical condition or event is a triggering event for the provision of benefits under the product.

(2) Example of determining eligibility for a special credit program or credit assistance program. A not-for-profit organization establishes a credit assistance program pursuant to a written plan that is designed to assist disabled veterans in purchasing homes by subsidizing the down payment for the home purchase mortgage loans of qualifying veterans. The organization works through mortgage lenders and requires mortgage lenders to obtain medical information about the disability of any consumer that seeks to qualify for the program, use that information to verify the consumer's eligibility for the program, and forward that information to the organization. A consumer who is a veteran applies to a creditor for a home purchase mortgage loan. The creditor informs the consumer about the credit assistance program for disabled veterans and the consumer seeks to qualify for the program. Assuming that the program complies with all applicable law, including applicable fair lending laws, the creditor may obtain and use medical information about the medical condition and disability, if any, of the consumer to determine whether the consumer qualifies for the credit assistance program.

(3) Examples of verifying the medical purpose of the loan or the use of proceeds.

(i) If a consumer applies for $10,000 of credit for the purpose of financing vision correction surgery, the creditor may verify with the surgeon that the procedure will be performed. If the surgeon reports that surgery will not be performed on the consumer, the creditor may use that medical information to deny the consumer's application for credit, because the loan would not be used for the stated purpose.

(ii) If a consumer applies for $10,000 of credit for the purpose of financing cosmetic surgery, the creditor may confirm the cost of the procedure with the surgeon. If the surgeon reports that the cost of the procedure is $5,000, the creditor may use that medical information to offer the consumer only $5,000 of credit.

(iii) A creditor has an established medical loan program for financing particular elective surgical procedures. The creditor receives a loan application from a consumer requesting $10,000 of credit under the established loan program for an elective surgical procedure. The consumer indicates on the application that the purpose of the loan is to finance an elective surgical procedure not eligible for funding under the guidelines of the established loan program. The creditor may deny the consumer's application because the purpose of the loan is not for a particular procedure funded by the established loan program.

(4) Examples of obtaining and using medical information at the request of the consumer.

(i) If a consumer applies for a loan and specifically requests that the creditor consider the consumer's medical disability at the relevant time as an explanation for a diverse payment history information in his credit report, the creditor may consider such medical information in evaluating the consumer's willingness and ability to repay the requested loan to accommodate the consumer's particular circumstances, consistent with safe and sound practices. The creditor may also decline to consider such medical information to accommodate the consumer, but may evaluate the consumer's application in accordance with its otherwise applicable underwriting criteria. The creditor may not deny the consumer's application or otherwise treat the consumer less favorably because the consumer specifically requested a medical accommodation, if the creditor would have extended the credit or treated the consumer more favorably under the creditor's otherwise applicable underwriting criteria.

(ii) If a consumer applies for a loan by telephone and explains that his income has been and will continue to be interrupted on account of a medical condition and that he expects to repay the loan by liquidating assets, the creditor may, but is not required to, evaluate the application using the sale of assets as the primary source of repayment, consistent with safe and sound practices, provided that the creditor documents the consumer's request by recording the oral conversation or making a notation of the request in the consumer's file.

(iii) If a consumer applies for a loan and the application form provides a space where the consumer may provide any other information or special circumstances, whether medical or non-medical, that the consumer would like the creditor to consider in evaluating the consumer's application, the creditor may use medical information provided by the consumer in that space on that application to accommodate the consumer's application for credit, consistent with safe and sound practices, or may disregard that information.

(iv) If a consumer specifically requests that the creditor use medical information in determining the consumer's eligibility, or continued eligibility, for credit and provides the creditor with medical information for that purpose, and the creditor determines that it needs additional information regarding the consumer's circumstances, the creditor may request, obtain, and use additional medical information about the consumer as necessary to verify the information provided by the consumer or to determine whether to make an accommodation for the consumer. The consumer may decline to provide additional information, withdraw the request for an accommodation, and have the application considered under the creditor's otherwise applicable underwriting criteria.

(v) If a consumer completes and signs a credit application that is not for medical purpose credit and the application contains boilerplate language that routinely requests medical information from the consumer or that indicates that by applying for credit the consumer authorizes or consents to the creditor obtaining and using medical information in connection with a determination of the consumer's eligibility, or continued eligibility, for credit, the consumer has not specifically requested that the creditor obtain and use medical information to accommodate the consumer's particular circumstances.

(5) Example of a forbearance practice or program. After an appropriate safety and soundness review, a creditor institutes a program that allows consumers who are or will be hospitalized to defer payments as needed for up to three months, without penalty, if the credit account has been open for more than one year and has not previously been in default, and the consumer provides confirming documentation at an appropriate time. A consumer is hospitalized and does not pay her bill for a particular month. This consumer has had a credit account with the creditor for more than one year and has not previously been in default. The creditor attempts to contact the consumer and speaks with the consumer's adult child, who is not the consumer's legal representative. The adult child informs the creditor that the consumer is hospitalized and is unable to pay the bill at that time. The creditor defers payments for up to three months, without penalty, for the hospitalized consumer and sends the consumer a letter confirming this practice and the date on which the next payment will be due. The creditor has obtained and used medical information to determine whether the provisions of a medically-triggered forbearance practice or program apply to a consumer.
